The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been admitted to the membership of the Society since the last meeting of the Executive Committee. The names are arranged in alphabetical order. The names of the persons who have been admitted to the membership of the Society since the last meeting of the Executive Committee are as follows:

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper and is organized into several lines. The script is dense and flowing, characteristic of early modern handwriting. The document appears to be a letter or a formal record, with some words and phrases being more prominent than others. The text is written in a single column, with some lines starting with a large initial letter. The paper shows signs of wear, including small holes and discoloration.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Persian or Urdu, covering the entire page. The text is densely written and appears to be a continuous passage. There are two large, dark circular marks or holes visible on the page, one near the center and one towards the right side. The paper is aged and shows signs of wear, including a large tear on the left edge.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a letter or document, spanning the width of the page. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper with two visible holes. The script is dense and fills most of the page area.

Main body of handwritten text in a script, possibly Indic, covering the majority of the manuscript strip. The text is arranged in several lines, with some lines being more densely written than others. There are some dark spots or ink blots visible on the paper.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Persian or Urdu, covering the entire page. The text is written in dark ink on aged, slightly discolored paper. There are two prominent dark spots (possibly holes or stains) near the center of the page. The script is dense and flowing, with some variations in line thickness and spacing. The text appears to be a continuous passage, possibly a letter or a manuscript entry.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general consideration of the subject, and to a discussion of the various theories which have been advanced to explain the phenomena. It is shown that the theories of the various authors are incomplete, and that a new theory is required. The author then proceeds to develop his own theory, and to show how it accounts for all the facts observed. The theory is based on the assumption that the particles of matter are not continuous, but are composed of small, discrete units. These units are called atoms, and they are assumed to be in constant motion.
The author shows that this theory accounts for all the facts observed, and that it is in complete agreement with the experimental results. The theory is then applied to the various phenomena observed, and it is shown that it accounts for all of them. The author concludes by stating that his theory is the only one which accounts for all the facts observed, and that it is in complete agreement with the experimental results.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem. It is shown that the problem is of great importance and that it has not been completely solved. The author then presents a new method for solving the problem.
The method is based on the use of the Fourier transform. It is shown that the Fourier transform of the function satisfies a certain differential equation.
The solution of this equation is then used to find the original function.
The method is applied to the case of the heat conduction problem. It is shown that the method is very effective and that it gives results which are in good agreement with the experimental data.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a letter or a page from a manuscript. The text is written in a dark ink on aged, slightly discolored paper. The script is dense and fills most of the page, with some lines showing signs of fading or being written more lightly than others. There are two prominent dark spots, possibly ink blots or holes, located near the center of the page. The overall appearance is that of a historical document.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or letter. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper and is organized into several lines. There are two prominent dark circular marks, possibly holes or ink smudges, on the right side of the page. The script is dense and difficult to decipher without specialized knowledge of the language.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or letter. The text is written in a dark ink on aged, slightly discolored paper. The script is dense and fills most of the page. There are some visible ink smudges and a small dark spot near the center. The text appears to be in a historical or religious context, possibly a letter or a record. The handwriting is consistent throughout, suggesting a single scribe. The overall appearance is that of an old, well-preserved manuscript.

[The following text is extremely faint and largely illegible due to fading and bleed-through from the reverse side. It appears to be a continuous paragraph of handwritten Burmese script.]
